

Society for International Development and ISS present

In cooperation with the Ministry of Foreign Affairs and the Municipality of The Hague:

No Women, No Peace!

New Spaces for International Engagement with Dr. Shirin Ebadi

(c) Sarah Carr

Our discussion with Shirin Ebadi on 25 NOVEMBER

Women in the Middle East are increasingly targeted and even killed by extremists for challenging their traditional role in society. They're seen as mere victims and their contributions to building peace and democracy are disregarded. The need for female leaders to establish a lasting peace is crucial. What pro-active role can women play in the peacekeeping process? How can we support these women and put a stop to the violence against them?

Dr. Shirin Ebadi is a renowned human rights activist, former judge and the first Iranian winner of the Nobel Peace Prize in 2003. She will discuss the role of women in promoting peace and democracy in the Middle East.

Come and join the discussion at the ISS auditorium on 25 November!

Date: Tuesday 25 November

Time: 16:00 – 17:45

Location: Auditorium, Institute of Social Studies, Kortenaerkade 12, The Hague

Language: English

Registration: registration@sidnl.org

Admission: Free for students and SID members, non-members € 7,50 (including drink)

To be expected:

Tuesday 25 November with

Richard Jolly 'The Power of UN ideas'

Society for International Development

www.sidnl.org

info@sidnl.org

SOCIETY FOR INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT
Netherlands Chapter

